FINDING THE PERFECT FIT FOR YOU

Advice for parastomal hernia patients from Salts

Excellence in stoma care

Fitting a parastomal hernia into your life

If you're suffering from a parastomal hernia, you've probably got all sorts of questions you want to ask. What is it? What caused it? Why has it happened to you?

In this leaflet, we'll try to answer some of the more common questions that we hear from hernia patients.

We'll also show you how, with the right choice of products and a sensible lifestyle, a hernia doesn't have to stop you living exactly the way you want to.

What is a parastomal hernia?

During surgery to create a stoma, the medical team make a cut in the muscles of the abdomen, around the tummy area.

This makes the muscles weaker around the stoma area, which means a section of the bowel can sometimes push through the muscle wall to form an uncomfortable bulge, or 'parastomal hernia'.

There's no clear, single cause for a parastomal hernia, although older men and people who are significantly overweight seem to be more at risk.

How will your hernia affect you?

It might reassure you to know that, as a parastomal hernia sufferer, you're not alone. Research shows up to 50% of stoma patients develop a hernia following surgery.

In the early stages, feelings of distress, discomfort and self-consciousness are common. But the fact that so many hernia patients are getting on with their lives tells you it doesn't have to be a major problem.

Your Stoma Care Nurse can help you with the emotional issues of coping with your hernia.

Remember, you don't have to suffer in silence!

Some ways to help prevent a parastomal hernia

Even if you haven't developed a parastomal hernia after your operation, there is still a chance of it happening in the weeks and months ahead.

Most parastomal hernias develop over time, after surgery; it might be a couple of months after, 12 months post-surgery or possibly even longer.

Remember, you should always speak to your Stoma Care Nurse before you set out on any programme of exercise.

The good news is: you can reduce the risk by doing some gentle tummy exercises – ask your Stoma Care Nurse for advice. Then, when you feel ready, you can start going for short walks or a swim.

Other tips to reduce the risk of developing a hernia include:

- Avoiding any heavy lifting for at least 3 months after your operation
- Watching your weight and following a healthy diet
- Standing and sitting up straight at all times
- Supporting your stoma and abdomen with your hand when you cough for the first few months after surgery
- Using a support belt or girdle if you're lifting things at work or home

“Thank you, Salts, for designing such great products”

We talked to Mrs P, aged 69, from Leicestershire, about her experience of life with a hernia.

“I had surgery to form a colostomy back in March 2007 after suffering from bowel cancer. I tried to take it easy for the first few months and avoided heavy lifting. However, I still developed a hernia. I was upset to begin with – I’d just got used to having a stoma and then I end up having to battle with this bulge from my abdomen.

But I soon saw that there was help out there and I would be able to carry on as normal.

My Stoma Care Nurse introduced me to products from Salts Healthcare and I was so pleased that they offered a suitable fit for hernias. I like being able to choose between a one- or two-piece product, so I was happy to try Harmony® Duo and Confidence® Natural, when they became available. I found that there were advantages to both.”

Thank you, Salts!

A better fit for hernia patients from Salts

One of the most persistent problems parastomal hernia patients face is securing an effective fit for their wafer. Because a hernia creates an irregular ‘bulged’ surface, the adhesion of conventional wafers is often compromised, leading to leaks and discomfort.

So Salts set out to overcome the problem with a range of ‘hernia friendly’ products that offer easier fitting, extra security, added confidence and improved comfort.

It means that, whatever the size and shape of your hernia, you’ve got complete peace of mind in the knowledge that you couldn’t choose a more perfect fit.

Mrs P wearing Confidence® Natural closed

“The cut-outs on the wafer mean that it sits perfectly around my stoma and hernia, and doesn’t crease. It’s very soft against the skin, too.”

Mrs P applying Harmony® Duo

“With the flexible flange, it’s so easy to apply, even though my hernia can make it quite difficult to see what I’m doing. The clever notch and locator match up so you know it’s in the right place just by feel.”
